

Is Your Source Credible?

<input checked="" type="checkbox"/>	CRITERIA	How does your source meet the criteria?
	This source is one of the following: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • .gov and .mil (government run sites) • .edu (an education site) • OR a trusted and known .com/.org/.co site
	This site looks professional <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • This site is professional, clean, and organized
	The author is stated <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • You should use sites that have a stated author. Sometimes the author's name will be on the article or page, and sometimes you will have to dig a little deeper to an "about the author" page or a link on the main site.
	The site contains no typos or errors <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Grammar, spelling, and other errors are a hint that the information has not been reviewed carefully and may be suspect.
	There are citations or a bibliography <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • These will help you determine the legitimacy of secondary sources. Ask yourself if the bibliography shows quality research material.
	There is a date for the publication/revision of the page <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • You will need this information to cite properly. It is also important to know that your information is current.
	The information seems in depth and comprehensive <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • You want to look for sources dedicated to the information you are looking for, not a source, which briefly touches on your topic. 	